his aim is not to create an ideal or to reproduce nature, but rather to give form to the energy emanating from the metaphysics of human activity william james also languished, as did psychology, once consciousness as a subject was retired from it you may have executed a fantastic exercise during this matter